

Which Came First? The Chicken or the Egg??

As the awesome controversy continues, a little introspection will reveal the true solution to this ancient riddle: Hold your nose, breath and buns all at the same time and you will see the answer appear before you – it was The Chicken Tree.

RECOGNITION

On a still night of the full moon just after moon sets you can hear the ripe chickens clucking just before they fall off the tree and begin to run around – if you are very quiet and listen carefully. [Assuming, of course, there is a producing chicken tree in your immediate vicinity – they are rather rare these days of ecological devastation and endangered species.]

THE PROOF

Have you ever planted a properly fertilized egg and watched it grow?
[Of course not.]

VERIFICATION

Wearing lots of garlic around your neck and eating plenty of it at every opportunity is said to keep vampires away and repel upper respiratory infections [the common cold]. By experience everyone knows it is true! Have you ever seen anyone who followed that prescription ever attacked by a vampire or someone else's nasal congestion? So there.

PS.

All of the major chains {MacDonald's, Wendy's, Rally's etc.} will support this line of thought, after all, most of their meat comes from the humble hamburger bush.
